

Internationalization of local communities: some educational aspects

The ambiguousness of internationally expanding globalization determines the apparition of new challenges and trends including those at the local level that require an efficient coordination of local communities' efforts to wed with the major processes of integration of the world society so that not to be left off the trunk-road of global development. Thereupon the existing potential offers an excellent opportunity both for maintaining in-communal harmony and thus stability and for productive incorporation of local communities in internationalization processes. Along with that the potential of the university scholars and experts may be used in assisting community businesses with experted drafting and implementation of bargains with partners abroad thus supporting the local community economic development and its future perspectives. According to the author, an active role of university's experts in working out international projects and joint-ventures for local community also has been considered as an efficient step in internationalization of the local community.

Key words: globalization, internationalization, multiethnic community, polyconfessional community, tolerance, local community, education, university, scholar, expert, international project, partner.