SUMMARY

Organization: School of International Relations, Pyatigorsk State Linguistic University.

Key words: fashion journalism, print media about fashion and lifestyle, high fashion.

Topicality: Many issues associated with the term of fashion journalism can be categorized as ambivalent because fashion journalism established as an existing objective group, but has not yet emerged subjectively. Fashion journalism in Russian media market is mainly presented by magazines about fashion and lifestyle, focused on weaker sex with a certain lifestyle appropriate to their material prosperity.

Internationality of fashion press is built on a unity of interests of its audience to the news from the world of fashion industry, which limits elite periodicals with the scope of fashion.

In magazine market on the contrary started to form a circle of fashion publications which return elitism from just a consumption and a high fashion world to the area of social thoughts, the world of art and a culture. This corresponds to the Russian cultural model and fits into the context of the development and maintenance of the national press and on the background of formed Russian lifestyle and lack of appropriate ideology it became extremely relevant.

Despite all these facts, the work of Russian fashion publications is not reflected in works of local researchers.

Actuality of this study is the need for understanding and typological profile fashion media features, characteristics of the model, the study of the theoretical and practical aspects of the functioning of this type of publication in the modernization of society.
