Results of the research: at the end of our research, we can come to the following conclusion on the topic.

Analyzing the lingua-cultural peculiarities, we can state that the interview is the result of a communicative act between the interlocutors, and it stands out in the common system of journalistic genres. However, the text of the interview conforms to all established norms of processing and editing of the literary text. That is why the text of the interview is considered to be consolidated and completed.

In the works devoted to the study of interviews from the position of communicative theory, the interview also reviews in the light of intercultural communication. The intercultural communication is the process of direct interaction of different cultures.

In the texts of the interview, we can deal with a dialogue between different cultures, in semiotic and culturological terms. In this case, not only different personalities, but also representatives of different cultural and linguistic worldviews participate in communication. Linguistic world-image is a model of the world, which was formed on the basis of personal experience, obtained in accordance with his/her own culture.

The main function of the interview is to inform and persuade the audience. For this reason, the participants of the interview use a wide range of linguistic means of expression which belong to different registers. The interviewer and the interviewee utilize vivid metaphors and epithets, phraseological units, book vocabulary, cliché and colloquial vocabulary. The proximity of two styles, artistic and conversational, creates expression and helps to reflect peculiarities of the national character of the Spanish people.

Regardless of the topic and type of interview, these features are inherent in all texts of this genre, and, as its popularity is still growing worldwide, therefore, it is necessary to move forward in analysis of the lingua-cultural peculiarities this kind of texts to achieve successful communication.

Implementation advice: In this graduation qualifying work, we have only made a modest attempt to analyze the lingua-cultural peculiarities of the texts of interview on the material of Spanish newspapers. Summarizing this research, we can say that many issues related to the study of the linguistic extralinguistic features of this types of texts have not been sufficiently studied within the framework of mediallynguistics. We still need to develop this problem by studying it in a broader spectrum.
