SUMMARY

Subject of the thesis: China's foreign policy in the early 21st century.

Author: Maxim Hrebin

Academic Adviser: Adamova M.A. Assistant Professor, PhD, Political Science, Professor of the Department of international relations, world economy and international law.

Organization: School of International Relations, Chair of International Relations, World Economy and International Law, Pyatigorsk State Linguistic University.

Relevance of the research issue: modern China's foreign policy is determined by the principal provisions of the foreign policy doctrine of the PRC, the practice of interaction with other members of the international community, as well as the imperatives of economic globalization and the coordination of international efforts to address the universal threats to human development. Despite considerable overlap Chinese interests in the interest of the main centers of political and economic influence in the world arena, the process of their implementation is not always receive a definitive evaluation.

That is why the problem of analysis of China's foreign policy requires constant research from the perspective of a particular historical era.

The purpose of the work is to identify the main trends of foreign policy of China in the beginning of XXI century.

Research objectives: to explore the concept and essence of foreign policy; to consider the basic strategy and mechanisms of realization of foreign policy; to learn the basic strategy of the foreign policy of China in the beginning of XXI century; to analyze the role of China in the definition of the modern geopolitical situation.

Scientific novelty: Theoretical significance of the work lies in the fact that the provisions obtained in the process, contribute further in-depth understanding of the categories of "foreign policy". The main conclusions of research can be used for more detailed theoretical interpretation of the dynamics of political processes taking place in China. The results of the work can be used to continue work on a deep and comprehensive study of the problems of foreign policy of China.

Practical significance of work consists in the possibility of the use of the results of work into practical activity of political scientists, economists, experts in international relations.

These materials can be used in the process of developing and teaching courses in the system of higher education in Russia: geopolitics, international relations, world politics, political science, regional aspects of modern international relations.

Structure: the introduction the two chapters, containing four paragraphs, the conclusion and a 59-reference bibliography (seven of which are in foreign languages). The total volume is 77 pages.

Summary: China pursues the independent and peaceful foreign policy, always in favor of multipolarity in the world situation, actively adapt to the global economy, fully participates in regional cooperation, promotes the creation of a new international political and economic order.

China pursues a policy of full transparency, wishing on the basis of equality and mutual benefit to establish trade and economic relations with each country and each region of the world, as well as economic cooperation, scientific and cultural exchange, to promote joint prosperity. The increasing economic power of China will play a significant role in international relations, to form an integration area in East Asia, to be implemented in the economic territory of other countries. China is committed to strengthening international cooperation on the basis of establishing stable long-term economic relations. The most common in the Chinese social science point of view is, that in world politics has been a tendency of growing of multipolarity of the modern world in conditions of globalization.

China currently concerned about the threat to the hegemony of the USA and the problems of globalization. An important feature of China's foreign policy in conditions of globalization remains constant search not power, but not excluding stiffness, effective ways of realization of their national interests, focusing on bilateral relations with individual States.

In the result of the analysis of the main trends of foreign policy of China in the modern world it is shown that it is gradually coming to the forefront, reinforcing their political status of the real achievements in the field of economy. We can say that China is confidently turning from a regional to global power.