

The cognitive modeling of business discourse

The article reconstructs a cognitive model of business discourse. It deals with the problems of interrelations between the language representation and its cognitive analogues, first and foremost with the particular structures of professional business knowledge determined by the particular social institution (business) and its impact on communicants' mental and verbal activity.

Key words: cognitive model, business discourse, structure, professional knowledge, social institution.