

SUMMARY

Theme: relations of the Republic of France with the former colonies

Author: Tedeyev T.T.

Scientific adviser: Adamova M.A., associate professor of the international relations, international economy and international law department.

Organization: The Institute of International Relationships; the international relations, international economy and international law department; Pyatigorsk State Linguistic University.

The relevance of the research work is that the former colonies gained independence and recognition, have enormous influence on integration, political, economic, military-strategic, global processes. The man moved into a period of economic and military-political crises, in the difficult political processes, the country which had, until recently, colonial status, are in the foreground in world politics. Former colonial countries of Asia, South America, North America, Africa and the Far East at the present stage capture leading positions in the world politics and global processes. Countries with a colonial past are constantly membership in international organizations of Europe and the world, taking the free political participation in international processes. Complex or divergent interests of the former metropolis with, for example, this former colony as USA, may affect the pace of development of relations in terms of EU - US, EU - NATO, European and world politics. The relationship of these two countries have the common goals of the Foundation, which is a common commitment to democracy in politics, which helps in resolving world conflicts, crises and global problems. The US regards the French Republic as a platform for the conducts of its international policy on the European arena, France sees in the face of the United States of America reliable political, economic and cultural partner.

The research purpose: is the analysis of the relations of France with its former colonies.

The research goals:

- explore the theoretical and methodological approaches to the definition of the colonial system and the colonial policy;
- characterize diplomatic relations with former colonies at the present stage;
- provide a comprehensive analysis of relations with France, the former colony of the United States;
- analyze the relations of France with a former colony of Algeria.

Scientific novelty of the research basic factors influencing the attitude of the metropolis and former colonies, which are to support and promote the political positions of the former colonial States. The analysis of the modern state of Franco-American relations, which are based on common political and strategic objectives in the heart of the Franco-Algerian relations the main component is a cultural element in the relationship.

The research work structure: aimed at the study and solution of the tasks and includes: introduction, two chapters, consisting of 4 paragraphs, conclusion and bibliography bibliography, numbering 29 domestic and 20 foreign sources. Total work is 70 pages

Summary: The era of colonial policy, world history, is remembered as one of the most violent times in history. Due to the exploitation of forced labour and violence, European countries were receiving benefits, which were accompanied by the rapid pace of development/The most notable political changes were the disappearance of many borders. For example, the territory of Afghanistan has increased for the rapid exchange between the Russian and British Empires India.

Colonial policy led to the fiscal system and tax and appearance money relations in the territories of the countries in which before such a relationship was not. The development of urbanization and the class division of the people accelerated thanks to forced labour on the part of Metropolitan areas. The role of the state, which was able to intervene in the life of any individual.

France tries to maintain friendly and mutually beneficial relations in all spheres with their former colonies, as a pledge of any relationship always been mutual respect, tolerance, reasonable restraint, good will, ready for a civilized dialogue and the multiple and comprehensive development.