

SUMMARY

Subject of the thesis: The role of Russian-American talks in resolving modern international conflicts.

Author: Gaik Gasparyan.

Academic Adviser: Soloveva E.A., Assistant Professor, PhD Political Science.

Organization: School of International Relations, Chair of International Relations, World Economy and International Law, Pyatigorsk State Linguistic University.

Relevance of the research issue is determined by the growing role of international negotiations in conflict resolution. This is due to the fact that in today's world of international negotiations is the main mechanism for resolving conflict conditions and implementing coordinated work of the world members' community. At the present stage of international development, consensus building appears to be very difficult because of the divergent positions and interests of the states. In the XXI century, the problem of conflict resolution is very urgent character, particularly for members of the international community, such as Russia and the United States, from the consolidation of efforts which largely depends on the possibility of countering the threats and conflicts of modernity.

The purpose of the work is in complex analysis and systematization of political and technological aspects of running US-Russian negotiations and offers a range of measures to improve their efficiency in the settlement of the modern international conflicts.

Research objectives:

- systematize basic approaches, concepts and specifications for international negotiations as a political science class;
- define the role of negotiations as means of settling international conflicts of modernity;
- identify the characteristics and strategies of Russian-American negotiations, assess their effectiveness;
- characterize the main problems and suggest ways to optimize the Russian-American negotiating practices in the modern settlement of international conflicts.

Scientific novelty of the research is based on the practical analysis of the Russian-American talks disclosed and justified reason to improve the system of international negotiations as a mechanism for conflict resolution in an interdependent world and the contemporary challenges and threats.

Structure: introduction, the two chapters, each of which contains two paragraphs, the conclusion and 82-reference bibliography (twenty four of which are in foreign languages). The total volume is 80 pages.

Summary: Modern conflicts have become one of the leading factors of instability. Modern conflicts have become one of the leading factors of instability. They tend to sprawl, they connect a growing number of participants, which creates a considerable threat not only to those directly involved in the conflict, but also the international community as a whole.

At the present stage of the international community's development plays the role of international negotiations indispensable mechanism that allows co-exist and interact on the basis of peaceful, and respond constructively to comprehensive problems.

The modern situation in the world is due to the concept of world order XXI century - the harmonization and coordination of the principles of relations between states in the international arena, which will promote the establishment of world without violence, global security, transition states and regions of a stable and lasting development, the interaction of the entire world community. However, simultaneously with this situation, the modern picture of the XXI century is also characterized by the presence of comprehensive threats.

Possibility of conflict management largely depends on the consolidation efforts of the international community. In this regard, today it is impossible to take certain measures to prevent and resolve conflicts without the major international players in the world such as Russia and the United States.

The role of Russian-American talks is incredibly high in resolution of modern international conflicts. The results of the talks between such powers as Russia and the U.S. can be a decisive factor in global development and a guarantor of world stability. Agreement between Russia and the United States associated with the establishment and maintenance of peace and cooperation can provide full guarantees for the implementation and execution of the agreement. All these statements are extremely important in the face of a serious threat that humanity may face in the future.

In this context, the main task is to solve possible problems and prospects of improving establishment negotiations in the development and strengthening of Russian-American relations in the field of conflict resolution. In other words, in front of Russia and the United States faces a serious and difficult task - to use modern facilities and mechanisms for the construction and improvement of constructive negotiations on the further development of Russian-American relations, effectively providing national and global security, and meeting modern threats.