

PYATIGORSK STATE LINGUISTIC UNIVERSITY

The School of International Relations

The Department of International Relations, World Economy and International Law

Maxim Melnikov

SUMMARY

of the final qualifying paper

ISRAELI FOREIGN POLICY ON

POST-SOVIET SPACE

The supervisor of studies: Denis A. Mirgirod, Ph.D. in Politics

The paper is devoted to studying specific characteristics of foreign policy of Israel state in the post-Soviet space, revealing the main problems of bilateral relationships. The paper consists of two chapters.

After the collapse of the Soviet Union many new countries have appeared on the global map. All of them have become the objects of interest for many other states. And Israel is undoubtedly among such countries.

The topicality of the research issue arises from the fact that, on the one hand, Israel is making serious steps in establishing bilateral relationships with a huge number of countries all over the world, including post-Soviet states, and, on the other, it is clear that there is not so many researches, concerning this topic.

The Object of the research includes analysis of governmental foreign policy and it's peculiarities.

The Subject of the research includes the analysis of Israeli Foreign Policy at the level of interstate cooperation with the former Soviet Union countries.

Research Objectives:

- To consider the essence, the contents and mechanisms of realization of modern foreign policy of the state;
- To define the role of national interests in foreign policy of the states;

- To analyze the contents of the military policy doctrine of Israel;
- To reveal the main features of Israeli foreign policy on the post-Soviet space;

The Scientific Novelty of research consisting in the given work includes the classification of post-Soviet countries on three major groups, depending on the level of cooperation with Israel. Peculiarities of communication with each country were also mentioned.

The Texture of this research is defined by logic and consists of the following: two heads including two paragraphs for each one, a conclusion, and a bibliographic list of the literature used from 105 sources including 35 sources in foreign languages. The total amount of pages in this research constitutes 91 typewritten pages.

In the first chapter the conceptual approaches to the definition of foreign policy are analyzed. The authors analyze the essence, the contents, the mechanisms of foreign policy realization. The authors pay attention to the correlation between the foreign police of the state and its public policy.

In the second chapter of the research the main stages and features of Israeli foreign policy are described. Moreover, we are trying to analyze the influence of «Peripheral Alliance» conception on the foreign policy of Israel. Finally, all the post-Soviet countries were divided on specific groups.

The system of national goals of Israel in post-Soviet region include trade and economic cooperation, energy imports cooperation and governmental security arrangements.

In conclusion, we have found out that Israel is actively trying to cooperate with practically all of the states in post-Soviet region. However, the level of cooperation differs heavily. The region of Central Asia (especially Uzbekistan and Kazakhstan) is in the center of attention of Israel state. Israel's public policy is on close quarters with USA and Turkey. Jewish expat communities also play an important role in bilateral cooperation.