The topicality of the research arises from the fact that the Middle East, especially the Levant, is one of the priority directions of the American foreign policy. The Levant is a very big region of the Eastern Mediterranean, which locates between Turkey and Egypt (Syria, Lebanon, Israel, Jordan, Palestine, Egypt, Turkey, etc.). In the strict sense, it includes Syria, Palestine and Lebanon, which were the centers of trade connecting the East and the West. It is a unique region which differs from Arabic world by religious and political diversity.

The Object of the research is a phenomena of the modern terrorism.

The Subject methods of counteracting of modern terrorism at the domestic, regional and international levels.

Research Objectives:

— To explore the origins of terrorism, up to its contemporary manifestations;
— To perform the types of modern terrorism, its forms and manifestations;
— To consider methods of struggle against manifestations of terrorism today;
— To analyze trends in the development of combating international terrorism on various levels.

The structure of this research is defined by logic and consists of two chapters, each including three paragraphs, a conclusion and a bibliography of 118 sources, including 29 sources in foreign languages. The total amount of pages in this research constitutes 91 typewritten pages.

In the first chapter the conceptual approaches to the definition of such phenomena like terrorism and modern terrorism are analyzed. The nature, aims, purposes and different forms of terrorism existence are considered. The role of modern terrorism in the present days is also studied.

In the second chapter of the research measures to combat terrorism are described. Moreover, methods for countering terrorism at the regional, international and national levels are defined.

In conclusion, it was established that terrorism has long gone beyond national borders and has acquired an international character. He was efficient and effective weapon of intimidation and destruction in eternal and irreconcilable dispute different worlds. Every year creates more and more organizations to fight international terrorism - this mission is assigned mainly to the United Nations, also issued important documents aimed at combating terrorism; created anti-terrorist centers.

Terrorism is a method, a tactic, not a political program or ideology. It is possible and necessary to destroy the terrorists and to take measures to prevent terrorist attacks, but to fight against such tactics as pointless, to combat international terrorism is not enough efforts of one great power or even a group of highly developed countries. Overcoming international terrorism as a growing global problem requires a collective effort of the majority of States and peoples on the planet, the entire world community. International terrorism in recent decades has turned from a local problem into a global one. He became one of the most dangerous phenomena of our time. International terrorism itself causes very significant damage, taking tens, hundreds and thousands of human lives and leading to considerable economic losses. However, as can be seen from the diagram, international terrorism has an important place in the complex global problems. The growing problem of international terrorism and other global problems can lead to the death of all mankind. Thus, my hypothesis, put forward at the beginning of the study, confirmed.