Subject matter: «Structural-semantic logical features of English military slang»
Author: Tuchin V.V.
Scientific Supervisor: A.A. Melikyan
Information about the sponsor organization: Pyatigorsk State Linguistic University; 9 Kalinin St., Pyatigorsk, Stavropol Krai.
Topicality of the research: The particular interest in this issue is an English military slang as a subspecies of modern slang in English. The analysis of integration of slang in all spheres of life, structural and semantic features of the lexical means in English military slang, as well as reflection of cultural specifics of slang are major goals in the final qualifying work.
Objective of the research: The aim of graduate qualifying work is the structural and semantic analysis of the English military terminology and jargon, as well as the determining trends of this subsystem of slang.
Tasks of the research: Relevance of the thesis is determined by the following factors: the growing interest of linguists to slang; insufficient knowledge of English military slang, ambiguity of interpretation of this term; the prospect of this group of lexical English vocabulary and its influence on the realities of everyday life of certain groups.
Theoretical and practical significance of the research: The present research is important because its results can be used in teaching practical and theoretical linguistic courses, translation training courses and further theoretical studies.
Results of the research: Object of study is the logical-semantic properties of modern English slang. Subject of the research in the work is structurally - lexical, semantic and etymological features of English military slang and slang as subsystem.