Subject matter: Usage of Phraseological Units in Modern Youth Slang.

Author: Rosaliya K. Klitchkyan, 5th year student, Institute of Translatology and Multilanguage Studies.

Supervisor of the project: V.V. Radchenko, Associate Professor of the Chair of Theory and Practice of Translation and Interpretation.

ABSTRACT

This work is dedicated to the study of phraseologisms in slang. The object of the research are English phraseological units. The purpose of our work is the complex description of youth slang as one of subsystems of modern Russian and English languages: the identification of its differentiating signs, the description of features using slang and etc.

The main purposes of our work are:
1) to determine the volume and the content of the concept «slang»;
2) to define a place of a youth slang in systems of modern Russian and English languages;
3) to reveal specifics and operating conditions of these lexical units in speech of modern youth;
4) to open the word-formation potential of a modern youth slang, having specified the ways of slang formation and the sources of its replenishment.
5) to define the ways and some variants of slang translation

The practical value of our work consists in using the received results in practice of teaching English, and also by preparation of the manuals; when writing yearly projects.