Subject matter: «Invented languages in the novels by J.R.R.Tolkien: linguistic features and translation»
Author: Philippov A.A.
Scientific supervisor: Zaytseva O.L.
Information about the sponsor organization: Pyatigorsk State Linguistic University; 9 Kalinin St., Pyatigorsk, Stavropol Krai.
Research relevance: the invented languages present the main difficulty for translation due to the unknown mechanisms of their manifestation.
Purpose: to describe the significant features studied languages an analyze their grammar and syntactic structure
Tasks: to list the main characteristic features of studied languages; to define the method of translating of the languages; to analyze the given translations/
Theoretical and practical significance: is in complex approach towards the study of invented languages that enables the researcher to reveal the mechanism of semantic transformation of the extra linguistic reality into text discourse.
Results of the research: the invented languages reflect the live language structures and their study help understand the specific features of real language: at the same time results show the possibility to invent new language systems if necessary.