Summary

UNIVERSITIES Graduation Master Thesis from:
Pyatigorsk State Linguistic University
Institute of International Service, Tourism and Foreign Languages
English and Romance Languages Department
Theory and Methods of Teaching of Intercultural Communication Chair

The purpose of the work is the theoretical substantiation of the effectiveness of using training techniques and the development of training sessions for intercultural competence.

The actuality of the research is determined by the necessity of teaching intercultural communication and the formation of intercultural competence of students, providing future specialists conditions for overcoming communication barriers, hindering mutual understanding, properly and professionally compete on the international labor market.

Object of research is process of teaching intercultural communication.

The work consists of introduction, two parts, the conclusions and the list of the literature.

In chapter one theoretical bases of training of cross-cultural communication are described, the reasons interfering mutual understanding between partners in communication reveal, classification of cross-cultural trainings is described, their theoretical justification is given. In chapter two the technology of training of cross-cultural mutual understanding is considered. Its structure and carrying out technique is described.

In this work methods of training of cross-cultural communication are studied. The main concepts of modern terminology are considered. In the course of writing of work it is revealed that an effective remedy of training of cross-cultural communication is training. Thus, all objectives of research were solved and the research objective is reached. Features of training as method of training of cross-cultural communication are studied.